Wow your audience with this fun and informative two minute introduction video. Whether you are a website manager or an information junkie, I'm sure you can relate to this. Why call it two minutes? Well the speech while catchy, doesn't really give a lot of value when you look at the facts!Q: Rewrite a url to another without affecting the existing data I need to rewrite a url from xyz.com/test_page.php?var=1 to abc.com/index.php?var=1. The function I use is RewriteRule ^index.php\?var=(\d) index.php?var=$1 [R=301,L] But this changes the existing data as well. How can I avoid this? A: You can't (well I don't think you can, but have tested and it does not work... So let's say it's a good guess). The RewriteRule does a "301" permanent redirect, where "301" means this rule should be fired even if the original URL matched. This can be dangerous because it implies a complete 301-redirect. Even if the user clicks the link from the browser's URL bar, the original URI is kept internally forever (well, until browser/internet/whatever proxies do their stuff). Instead, try using the RewriteCond like RewriteRule ^test_page\.php\?var=(\d) index.php?var=$1 [NC,L,R] which does nothing if you're not on the rewrite path. To keep the original, use: RewriteCond %{REQUEST_URI} !^/index.php A: RewriteRule ^test_page\.php$ /index.php [L,R] A: You can use RewriteCond statement to exclude direct files, for example RewriteCond %{REQUEST_URI}!
