Prostaglandin-dependent regulation of platelet thromboxane B2 biosynthesis is determined by phospholipase A2 activity. Isolated platelets from humans, dogs, and monkeys produce thromboxane B2 (TXB2) in response to thrombin, arachidonic acid, epinephrine, or ionophore A23187. In this study, we found that the relative level of TXB2 biosynthesis in response to these stimulants is related to the amount of extracellular cyclooxygenase activity present. Platelets isolated from dogs and monkeys produced more TXB2 in response to arachidonic acid and epinephrine than platelets from humans. Incubation of isolated human platelets with the irreversible inhibitor of arachidonate metabolism, mepacrine, inhibited the arachidonate-induced generation of TXB2. Inhibition of thrombin-stimulated TXB2 formation by mepacrine was counteracted by prostaglandin E1. In contrast, cyclooxygenase activity and platelet aggregation in response to arachidonic acid were not inhibited by mepacrine. Activation of platelet phospholipase A2 activity by bovine serum albumin was also diminished by mepacrine, but the inhibitory effect was not reversed by prostaglandin E1. Incubation of platelets with methylarachidonyl
